

Costa Rica --- A Country of Eco-Tourism

I am from Costa Rica, a small country in Central America. Many kinds of animals and plants live there. It has many beautiful views. How can we protect this delicate environment? One answer is eco-tourism. Eco-tourism protects the environment, and it makes work for people. Let's look at two examples.

Many people visit our rainforests. These visitors look at the trees and animals. The rainforests need protection. So bridges connect the trees. People walk from tree to tree on the bridges. This is good for the rainforests. It protects the trees and the ground around them. It is also good for the people of Costa Rica. They can work as tour guides.
